Governor Bradley, of Nevada, is very much disgusted with the cares, responsi-bilities and importunities of official life. He declares that, if forgiven for having accepted the office, he will at the close of his term return to the shades of private life, never to emerge therefrom. The people, regardless of politics, are warm in their enconiums upon Governor Brad-ley's integrity, and the respect of all will follow him into retirement. It is seldom that the Democrat party presents men like Bradley for preferment.

If possible, it should be completed and mounted at Philadelphia, ready for use at the coming Centennial Celebration.
